

Game Jam outline

1. Start: You awaken in a classroom. In your inventory you have a badge and a piece of paper. The badge shows your assumed name and occupation (I think it should be an anagram of Joe Miner) . The paper explains you are investigating a missing person's case involving Joe Miner. In the room there are various items you can interact with which will aid you in escaping and investigating.
2. Missing poster: On the wall will be a missing poster for Joe Miner, easily in sight . The password for the computer will be the date that Joe Miner went missing .
3. Computer: Unlocking it will reveal a desktop with only one clickable link, a scanned newspaper article revealing information about Joe Miner (something fishy he was involved in or depressing). This is set up as a slide puzzle where you must put the pieces together. Once they are together, a compartment will slide open under the computer and give you 1/2 of a puzzle piece
4. Desk: At any point, the player can choose to investigate a typical desk. Taped underneath it will contain the other half of the puzzle given from the computer and another piece of paper revealing Joe Miner's backstory (photo with a shady friend? divorce papers? a secret note he made to someone?)
5. Safe: A safe within the conjoined room needs two pieces of a puzzle inserted into it. Once those pieces are found and inserted, it will click open and reveal a key. The conjoined room will be available the whole game, but almost completely empty save for a large safe with a large key and a smallish door next to it.
6. Closet: Once the key is secured, the player can unlock the cabinet. Within it is a large standing mirror and a piece of paper taped onto the glass. You loosely resemble Joe Miner, aged up. The piece of paper is a verification of plastic surgery you got years prior, to hide your identity.
7. End: After you put away the paper and continue looking at yourself. The game ends. You are finally confronted with your past identity.

Overall, to tie this into a conspiracy, I think he should have been involved in shady stuff in the past and then changed his identity and forcibly removed his memory.
